VILLAGE PLANS NOT LIKELY TO BE HINDERED

County Superintendent Thinks State Will Waive Road Specifications

BOARD MEETING FRIDAY

The postponed meeting of the village board will be held Friday night and the hearing on the road continued.

Considerable anxiety has been caused by the staking done by the state's engineers the past week in bringing the road up to state specifications. The new lines as drawn up by the state will necessitate a much greater expenditure than the plans drawn up by County Supervisor Russell.

Mr. Russell, in a statement made today, expressed the belief that the state would waive strict adherence to state road specification due to the fact that the stretch of road involved is in the town limits bringing about a curtailment of speed which would justify the state's requirements for safety.

Income Tax Blanks for Lake County Received

A. N. Tiffany, deputy collector of internal revenue in Lake county, announced that the income tax blanks for those whose annual salaries are less than $5,000 arrived at his office last week and can be obtained by all those desiring to file their schedules.

All those who paid income tax last year have received their blanks for this year from Chicago. The blanks that arrived last week were merely for those who have not previously paid a tax on their income.

The blanks for those whose income was in excess of $5,000 a year will arrive sometime about the first of February, according to Mr. Tiffany.

According to Mr. Tiffany his office will be open daily from 9 a. m. until 5 p. m. to receive the schedules and to assist those who are unable to master the intricacies of the document. Mr. Tiffany will have one assistant for the present and more if it becomes necessary.

"I would urge people to lose no time in filing their schedules, especially if they need help," Mr. Tiffany said. "Right now we have more time to devote to them—after a while we will be extremely busy. March 15 is the last date on which the schedules may be filed."

Antioch Telephone Co. in Annual Meeting

The Antioch Telephone company held their annual meeting Saturday, Jan. 28, at the State bank and election of officers for the year was held. W. E. Drom was elected president, E. O. Hawkins, vice president; Charles Richards, secretary and treasurer, and these officers with Harold Minio and M. M. Burke comprise the board of directors. The treasurer's report was favorable and the affairs of the company show sound financial condition. The company expects to extend their lines this year.

Allendale Wins Two Games

Allendale cagers annexed two more victories over the week end. The Mid-gets trounced the Round Lake five 20 to 7, and the 85 pounders walloped the Gurnee quintet, 31 to 2, at Gurnee.

The lightweight crew will tackle the Lake Forest Academy five at Lake Forest on Saturday.

Grayslake Five Wins

Grayslake trimmed the Palmer Park five at Grayslake Saturday by the score of 40 to 33. Mead, Mount, Ray and Cash Pester worked on the inland city quintet.

Did You Lose a Tam?

A blue tam with a white tassel has been left at the News office to await its owner. The hat may be had for the asking.

"Old Guard" in Fight to Control Marketing Co.

Considerable interest is being displayed in the coming election of the directors of the Milk Producers Cooperative Marketing Co. February 14. An attempt is being made to gain control of the company by the "old guard," those who made a failure in handling the affairs of the company before.

The present executive committee, in view of the business-like way in which the company is being handled, and the favorable financial report issued should be given full support for a continuance of their management of the company's business.

Despite rumors to the contrary the present executive board is said to be efficient and capable of bringing the affairs of the company into good sound financial condition, and considering the progress made in the short duration of their term, it is no more than right they should be given a full opportunity to demonstrate their ability.

Mr. Williams, the active head of the board, is a man of no mean business ability and has been successful in all his undertakings. A clipping from the local paper of Sorento, Ill., dated June 11, 1903 gives an account of one of Mr. Williams' first business ventures:

J. T. Williams was out from St. Louis a couple of days last week to make his farewell visit to Sorento. He has sold the Sorento Coal Company property to a company in Chicago, which also operates under the same name, and as he has done more for Sorento than any other man for past six years it will not be out of the way to make mention of some facts in connection with his management of the mine.

About six years ago, when he was only 22 years of age, he was called upon by the death of his father to take charge of what was then the Sorento Prospecting and Mining Co. Even young and inexperienced as he was, he showed at once that he had great executive ability, and he began to make improvements.

When he took charge of the property there were only 400 acres of coal lands to their credit, but when he lands to this spring he had over 10,000 acres of coal lands and options to turn over to his successor.

The tonnage of the mine six years ago was 400 tons, and today it is easily 1,000 tons, a most remarkable gain, and another gain that was more remarkable was the sale of the property of the mine. Six years ago the total sales would not reach $100,000 a year, while when he sold out the sales were running about $60,000 a month.

He also went through the experience of having the top works of the mine burn down at a time when things were looking blue for the company anyway, and instead of giving up, as many would have done under the same circumstances, he went to work with his characteristic energy, and the result proved that the fire was a blessing in disguise, for from being a worn out old plant, Sorento had the pleasure of seeing rise, phoenix like, from the ashes, one of the most modern and up-to-date top works in the state, equipped with self-dumping cages, shaking screens, box-car loader and everything on top that would facilitate the work of bringing the coal to the top.

Agriculture and Economics Course at High School

On Feb. 9th and 10th, the high school will conduct a short course in connection with the Agriculture and Home Economics work.

On Thursday p. m., at 1:30 Dean Davenport will talk and at 2:30 there will be sectional meetings on home management, and on crops lead by Miss Simms and Mr. A. C. Wilson respectively.

On Thursday evening a community meeting will be held at which Dean Davenport of the University of Illinois, will speak. In connection with this will be several short talks by local persons, together with a period for community singing.

On Friday at 1:30 the Agriculture section will discuss dairying, led by E. B. Heaton, E. M. Clark and C. Colvin. At the same time the Home Economics section will discuss foods nutrition, led by Miss Von Aiken, state leader of the extension department; Miss Cary will speak.

The same afternoon one of the agriculture boys of Antioch will tell us what he is doing with his dairy herd. Come and help boost the Antioch short course.

On Friday evening at 8 o'clock Mr. Carl Colvin, who has charge of the Smith-Hughes agriculture work of the school will give the address. The High School glee club will furnish the music together with a mixed quartette from the community.

It is hoped that everyone in this vicinity will arrange to spend Thursday and Friday attending these sessions. These talks will be interesting and instructive to everyone. There will be no school on Thursday and Friday afternoons.

Carey Electric Co. Loses in Wheatland Lawsuit

Decision has been handed down in the case of the Wisconsin Gas & Electric Co., by Judge Chester A. Fowler, of Fond du Lac, in favor of the plaintiff.

Judge Fowler held that a company in order to extend lines of electric service must have a certificate from the Wisconsin railroad commission. The case arose from the Carey company extending its electric lines from the towns of Wilmet, Salem and Randall to Wheatland, which the Wisconsin Gas & Electric Co. held infringed upon its rights. George W. Taylor represented the plaintiff as attorney and C. E. Randall the defendants.

"The Carey Electric & Milling Co.," said Judge Fowler in conclusion, "had no right to enter the town of Wheatland with lines or supply Slade's Corland with current without first receiving from the state railroad commission a declaration of certificate of public convenience and necessity." No costs were allowed either party.

Sues Soo Railroad for Burning Hay

The Minneapolis, St. Paul & Sault Ste. Marie railway company today was made defendant in a suit for $3,600 of damages, which Louis B. Anderson, of Vernon township, charges he sustained when a haystack on his farm, through which the railroad runs, caught fire and was destroyed.

Anderson claims that sparks from a locomotive set fire to grass along the right of way which spread to his haystack containing 60 tons of hay. He charges that the railroad was careless and had not burned the grass along the right of way to prevent accidental fires.

Auction Sales

An auction sale of interest to this section is that to be held by P. O. Sundell on his farm, known as the Little Brook farm, 1 mile north of Hickory, on the Millburn road. The sale will be held on Tuesday, Feb. 7. L. J. Slocum will be the auctioneer and George Bartlett, clerk.

Thomas Barosko will hold an auction sale on the farm, known as the old Doon farm, situated 4 miles south of Bristol, 11 miles northeast of Pikeville corners and 6 miles northeast of Antioch, Wednesday, Feb. 8. L. H. Freeman will be the auctioneer and J. E. Brook, the clerk. Mr. Barosko is entering the high grade cattle business.

Appoints James Tax Collector

J. C. James has been appointed township tax collector by Roy C. Brachner. Mr. James says the tax books will be in Antioch about February 25th.

Big Basketball Carnival at High School Friday

Three games of basketball will be played at the high school gym tomorrow night. The high school five will play Genoa Junction, while the "High Seconds" will meet Lake Villa. In the "High Seconds" game the team meets after game Antioch's town team meets Twin Lake's crack basketball quintet.

The first of these games, the Lake Villa—"High Seconds" game will start at 7:30 sharp and the high regulars game will follow immediately, with the town team game last on the list.

It is expected the gymnasium will be taxed to capacity with rooters, as this is the first time three games have been played in one evening. One admission covers the three games.

Last Thursday evening the high school won a close and exciting game from the Antioch town team. Both teams played exceptionally well, with the school boys in advantage on account of their speedy passing.

Busse Farm Is Sold; Chicagoan New Owner

The forty acre tract, known as the Busse farm, located on the east side of Fox Lake, has been sold to Victor Wilmot, of Chicago, the transfer papers being filed through the Lake County Title & Trust Company at Waukegan.

The transfer was made by Mrs. Carrie Busse, widow of Gustave Busse, and mother of the late Fred Busse, former mayor of Chicago, the purchase price being given at $34,000.

This is the farm over which there was considerable litigation some time ago, and which resulted favorably for Mrs. Carrie Busse.

Many Cars Pass Through Barrington to Ski Meet

Barrington people were treated to an advance demonstration Sunday, January 22, of the appearance the village will take on a pleasant summer Sunday afternoon after the cement pavement is finished through here.

Automobile loads of skiward bound Chicagoans and other from the south-east came through here at the rate of almost one a second for several hours. One reputable local business man counted 6,000 autos passing through the town in two hours.

Local garages were taxed beyond their capacity by the demands made upon them and all places where a sandwich or a cup of coffee could be secured did a land office business as long as their supplies held out.

Woman's Club to Meet Monday Afternoon

The Woman's club will meet Monday afternoon, Feb. 6, at two-thirty. Please notice the change of time from 3:15 to 2:30. The committee is making a collection of interesting heirlooms to be loaned to the club by the owners for this occasion. Later in the week a search your closets and attic and be ready when the collector calls. Each article will be marked with the owners name and so far as possible its history and age will be given.

It was thought that possibly a collection of this sort might be especially interesting to the older members of the community and a very cordial invitation is extended to them to be present. Possibly there are those whose memory will carry them back to the days of spinning wheels and tallow candles—cradles for the babies, brass toed boots for the little hoop skirts, bustles and bonnets for the women, brass kettles, pewter spoons and stone china for the housewife.

The invitation is to the general public all who are interested will be welcome. Looking at these mementoes of the good old days may enable us to see how far we have come—and send us home to "count our blessings."

Mrs. Hughes and Mrs. Osmond, delegates to the convention, will be ready with their reports and several musical numbers will complete the program.

What is a Woman's club? "A place where kindly helpful words are said And kinder deeds are done, This is a Woman's club, a haven fair Where toilers drop an hour their load of care, And if all its members were just like me What kind of a club would this club be?"

CONSECRATE EPISCOPAL CHURCH HERE

Distinguished Visitors Take Part in Beautiful Apostolic Ritual Service

BISHOP GRISWOLD PRESENT

By the Rev. Gardner Alpheus MacWhorter

With all the dignity of the Apostolic ritual of the Episcopal church enhanced by the presence of a score of distinguished visitors including the Suffragan Bishop of Chicago, the Right Reverend Sheldon Munsen Griswold, D. D., and seven clergymen of the Diocese of Chicago, Saint Ignatius' church, Antioch, was formally consecrated on Wednesday morning, February first, being the Feast of Saint Ignatius' of Antioch, Pisidia in the early days of Christianity.

The consecration service began at 10:30 o'clock with the reading of the Bishops' sentences of consecration by the Rev. W. D. McLean of Morgan Park, after which the Bishop walked about the church blessing the Baptismal font, the Altar rail, the Pulpit and Lectern from which the Bible is read, the Chancel steps upon which couples are united in Holy Matrimony, and the pews in which the congregation worships.

Morning Prayer was read by the Reverend Edward J. Batty, B. A., Priest-in-charge of Saint Lawrence's church, Libertyville, who is also the Priest-in-charge of Saint Ignatius' church, Antioch. The lesson was read by the Reverend Howard E. Ganster, Rector of Christ church, Waukegan, and the sermon was preached by the Reverend Ray Everett Carr, Rector of Saint Paul's church, Kankakee, Ill.

The service of Holy Communion was celebrated by the Rt. Rev. Griswold, D. D., assisted by the Rev. A. D. A Man To His Mate

By J. ALLEN DUNN

COPYRIGHT BOBBS MERRILL CO.

THE DEAD ALIVE

“Karluk ahoy!”
The face of Captain Simms paled, the tan turned to a sickly gray, and his jaw dropped. Rainey saw fear come into his eyes. His companion did not stir a muscle except for the quick shift of his glance, but went on sitting at the table, the gold in one palm, the fingers of his other hand resting on the grains.

“Jim Lund!” gasped the captain hoarsely.
“That’s me, you skulking sculpin! Thought I was bear meat by this, didn’t you, blast yore rotten soul to h—! But I’m back, Bill Simms. Back, an’ this time you don’t slip me!”

“You left me blind on the floe, Bill Simms!” he roared. “Blind, in a drivin’ blizzard with the ice breakin’ up! If I didn’t have use for yore carcass I’d twist yore head from yore scaly body like I’d pull up a carrot.”

Well, here they are—the main characters in the best tale that J. Allen Dunn ever wrote—all except Peggy, the captain’s handsome daughter. The scene is the main cabin of the Karluk, about to sail from San Francisco to the mysterious islands of the North Pacific for gold—a sample of which lies on the table. Lund, returned from the dead, and snow-blind, breaks in upon the “Syndicate.” The man handling the gold is Carlsen, physician and mate, who is planning to kill the captain with drugs, seize his daughter and make off with the gold. Rainey, a newspaper man there by chance, is snatched when the Karluk sails.

Of course the handsome Peggy is the “mate.” But who is the “man”—Lund? Carlsen? Rainey?

The author, born in England, is an Oxford man who has traveled the world and settled down here fifteen years ago to write short stories and a dozen or so thrilling “best sellers.” This story is as fascinating as Jack London’s “Sea Wolf”—and less brutal.

CHAPTER I

Blind Samson.

It was perfect weather along the San Francisco waterfront, and Rainey reacted to the brisk touch of the trade-wind upon his cheek, the breeze tempering the sun, bringing with it a tang of the open sea and a hint of oriental spices from the wharves. The dull thump of a heavy cane upon the timbered walk and the shuffle of uncertain feet warned him from blundering into a man tapping his way along the Embarcadero, a giant who halted abruptly and faced him, leaning on the heavy stick.

“Matey,” asked the giant, “could you put a blind man in the way of finding the sealin’ schooner Karluk?”

The voice fitted its owner, Rainey thought—a basso voice tempered to the occasion, a deep-sea voice that could bellow above the roar of a gale if needed. For all his shoregoing clothes and shuffle, the man was certainly a sailor, or had been. He wore dark glasses with side lenses, over which heavy brows projected in shaggy wisps of red hair.

Blind as the man proclaimed himself with voice and action, Rainey sensed something back of those colored glasses that seemed to be appraising him, almost as if the will of the man was peering, or listening, focused through those listless sockets.

“You’re not fifty yards from the Karluk,” Rainey replied. “But you’re bound in the wrong direction. Let me put you right. I’m going that way myself.”

“That’s kind of ye, matey,” said the other. “But I picked ye for that sort, hearin’ ye whistlin’ as you came swingin’ along. Give me the touch of yore arm, matey.”

Rainey wonderingly sized up his consort. The stranger’s bulk was enormous. Rainey was well over the average himself, but he was only a strippling beside this hulk, this stranded hulk, of manhood. And, for all the spectacled eyes and shuffling feet, there was a stamp of co-ordinated strength about the giant that bespoke the blind Samson. Given eyes, Rainey could imagine him agile as a panther, strong as a bear.

His weight was made up of thews and sinews, spare and solid flesh without an ounce of waste, upon a mighty skeleton. His face was heavy-bearded in hair of flaming, curling red, from high cheekbones down out of sight below the soft loose collar of his shirt. About thirty, Rainey judged him. Buffeted by time and weather, but in the prime of his strength.

“Snow-blind, matey,” said the man. “North o’ Point Barrow, a year an’ more ago. Brought me up all standin’. What are you? Steamboat man? Purser, maybe?”

“Newspaper man,” answered Rainey. “Waterfront detail. For the Times.”

“You don’t say so, matey? A writer, eh?”

Again Rainey felt the tug of that something back of the dark lenses, some speculation going on in the man’s mind concerning him. And he felt the firm fingers contract ever so slightly, sinking into the muscles of his forearm for a second with a hint of how they could bruise and paralyze at will. A faint sense of revulsion fought with his natural inclination to aid the handicapped mariner, and he shook it off.

“The Karluk sails tomorrow,” he said. “I had a short talk with Captain Simms when she docked. Not much of a yarn. She didn’t have a good trip, you know.”

“Why, I didn’t know. But—hold a minute, will ye? You see, Simms is an old shipmate of mine. He don’t dream I’m within a hundred miles o’ here. Aye, or a thousand.” He gave a deep-chested chuckle. “Now, then, matey, look here.”

Rainey was anchored by the compelling grip. They stood next to the slip in which the sealer lay. The Karluk’s decks were deserted, though there was smoke coming from the galley stovepipe.

“Simms is likely to be aboard,” went on the other. “Ye see, I know his ways. An’ I’ve come a long trip to see him. Nigh missed him. Only got in from Seattle this mornin’. He ain’t expectin’ me, an’ it’s in my mind to surprise him. By way of a joke. How’s the deck? Clear?”

“No one in sight,” said Rainey.

“Fine. Do me a favor, matey, an’ plot me down into the cabin, if so be the skipper’s there. If he ain’t, I’ll wait for him. I’ve got the right an’ run o’ the Karluk’s cabin. I know ev’ry inch of her. You’ll see when we go aboard. Let’s go.”

Rainey led him down the gangway to the deck of the sealer, still cluttered a bit with unstowed gear. Once aboard, the blind man seemed to walk with assurance, guiding himself with touches here and there that showed his familiarity with the vessel’s rig. He approached the cabin skylight, lifted it on the port side. Through it came the murmur of voices. The blind man nodded in satisfaction and widened his grin with a warning “hush-sh” to his guide.

“We’ll fool ‘em proper,” he lippered rather than uttered.

The companion doors were closed, but they opened noiselessly. The stairs were carpeted with corrugated rubber that muffled all sound. Two men sat at the cabin table, leaning forward, hands and forearms outstretched, fingering something. One Rainey recognized as the captain, Simms—a heavy, square-built man, gray-haired, clean-shaven, his flesh tanned, yet somehow unhealthy, as if the bronze was close to tarnishing.

The other was younger, tall, nervously active, with dark eyes and a dark mustache and beard, the latter trimmed to a vandyke. Between them was a long, slim sack of leather, a miner’s poke. It was half full of something that stuffed its lower extremity solid, without doubt the same substance that glistened in the mouth of the sack and the palms of the two men—gold—coarse dust of gold!

Rainey felt himself thrust to one side as the blind man straddled across the bottom of the companionway, towering in the cabin while he thrust his stick with a thump on the floor and thundered, in a hollow that seemed to fill the place and come tumbling back in deafening echo:

“Karluk ahoy!”

The face of Captain Simms paled, the tan turned to a sickly gray, and his jaw dropped. Rainey saw fear come into his eyes. His companion did not stir a muscle except for the quick shift of his glance, but went on sitting at the table, the gold in one palm, the fingers of his other hand resting on the grains.

“Jim Lund!” gasped the captain hoarsely.

“That’s me, you skulking sculpin! Thought I was bear meat by this didn’t you, blast yore rotten soul to h—! But I’m back, Bill Simms. Back, an’ this time you don’t slip me!”

Jim Lund’s face was purple-red with rage, great veins standing out upon it so swollen that it seemed they must surely burst and discharge their congested contents. He looked, Rainey thought, like a blind Berserker, restrained only by his affliction.

“You left me blind on the floe, Bill Simms!” he roared. “Blind, in a drivin’ blizzard with the ice breakin’ up! If I didn’t have use for yore carcass I’d twist yore head from yore scaly body like I’d pull up a carrot.”

Lund’s fingers opened and closed convulsively.

“I looked for you, Jim,” pleaded the captain, and to Rainey his words lacked conviction. “I didn’t know you were blind. I heard you shout just before the blizzard broke loose. There’s others present, Jim. I can explain it to you when we’re by ourselves. When you’re a mite calmer, Jim.”

Lund banged his stick down on the table with a smashing blow that made the man with the vandyke beard, still silent, keenly observant, draw back his arm with a catlike swiftness that only just evaded the stroke. The heavy wood landed fairly on the filled half of the poke and caused some of the gold to leap out of the mouth.

“What’s that I hit?” asked Lund. “Soft, like a rat?” He lunged forward, felt for the poke, and found it, lifted it, hefted it, his forehead puckered with deep seams, discovered the open end, poured out some of the colors on one palm, and used that for a mortar, grinding at the grains with his finger for a pestle, still weighing the stuff with a slight up-and-down movement of his hand.

He nodded as he slipped the poke into a side pocket, and the cabin grew very silent. Lund’s face was grimly terrible. He stepped back across the companionway.

“So,” he said, his deep voice muffled by some swift restraint, “you found it. And you’re going back after more?” His forehead was still creased with puzzlement. “Wal, I’m going with ye, eyes or no eyes, an’ I’ll keep tabs on ye, Bill Simms, by day and night. You can lay to that, you slimy-hearted swab!”

His voice, had risen again. Rainey saw the sweat standing out on the captain’s forehead as he answered: “Of course you’ll come, Jim. No need for you to talk this way.”

“No need to talk! By the eternal, what I’ve got to say’s bin steamin’ in me for fourteen months o’ blackness, an’ it’s comin’ out, now it’s started! Whys this man, who was talkin’ with ye when I come aboard?”

“What’s That I Hit?” Asked Lund.

“That’s Doctor Carlsen. He’s to be surgeon this trip, Jim,” said Simms deprecatingly, though he darted a look at Rainey half suspicious, half resentful.

Rainey, on the hint, turned toward the ladder quietly enough, but Lund had nipped him by the biceps before Rainey had taken a step.

“You’ll stay right here,” said Lund. “While I tell you an’ this Doc Carlsen what kind of a man Simms is, with his poke full of gold and me with the price of my last meal spent two hours ago. I won’t spin out the yarn.

“I rescued an Aleut off a bit of a berg one time. There warn’t much of him left to rescue. Hands an’ feet an’ nose was frozen so he lost ‘em, but the pore devil was grateful, an’ he told me something. Told about an island north of Berling strait, west of Kotzebue sound, where there was gold on the beach richer and thicker than I ever lay at Nome. I makes for it, gits close enough for my Aleut to recognize it—it ain’t an easy place to forget for one who has eyes—an’ then we’re blown south, an’ we git into ice an’ trouble. The Aleut dies, an’ I lose my ship. But I was close enough to get the reckonin’ of that island.

“Finally I land at Seattle, broke. I meet up with the man they call Hard-luck Simms. Also they called him Honest Simms those days. I like him, an’ I finally tell him about my island. I put up the reckonin’, an’ he supplies the Karluk, grub, an’ crew.

“Simms’ luck is still ag’in’ him. The Karluk gits into ice, gits nipped an’ carried north, ‘way north, with wind an’ current, frozen tight in a floe. It looks like we’ve got to winter there. Mind ye, I’ve given Honest Simms the reckonin’ of the island. We go out on the ice after bear an’ we kill a Kadlak bear. Me—I’ll never stand for the shootin’ of another bear if I can stop it.

“I’ve bin havin’ trouble with my eyes right along. I’m on the floe not eighty yards from Simms. No, not sixty! It was me killed the bear, an’ we’re goin’ back to the schooner for a sled. I stayed behind to bleed the brute. All of a sudden, like it always hits you, snow-blindness gits me, an’ I shouts to Honest Simms.

“Along comes a Point Arrow blizzard. That’s a gale that breeds an’ bursts of a second out of nowhere. It gath’ers up all the loose snow an’ ice crystals an’ drives ‘em in a whirlwind. You lose yore direction even when you got eyes. I’m left in it by that blige-blooded skunk, blind on the rockin’, breakin’ floe, while he scuds back to the schooner with his men. That’s Honest Simms! Jim Lund’s left behind but Honest Simms has the position of the island.”

“I didn’t hear you call out you were blind, Lund. The wind blew your words away. I didn’t know but what you were as right as the rest of us. We found the schooner by sheer luck before we perished. We looked for you—but the floe was broken up. We looked—

“Shut up!” bellowed Lund. “You sailed inside of twenty-four hours, Honest Simms. The natives told me so later, when I could understand talkin’ ‘n’ Dye know what saved me? The bear! I stumbled over the carcass when I was nigh spent. I ripped it up, and clawed some of the warm guts, an’ I climbed inside the bloody body an’ stayed there till it got cold, an’ I clamped down over me. Waitin’ for you to come an’ git me. Honest Simms!

“That bear was bed and board to me until the natives found it, an’ me in it, more dead than alive. Never mind the rest. I get here the day before you start back for more gold.

“An’ I’m goin’ with you. But first I’m goin’ to have a full an’ fair accountin’ o’ what you got already. I’ve got this young chap with me, an’ he’ll give me a hand to’d a square deal.”

Lund propelled Rainey forward a few steps and then loosened his grip. The captain of the Karluk appealed to him directly.

“Mr. Lund is unstrung,” said the captain. “He is under the delusion that we deliberately deserted him and, later, found the gold he speaks of. The first charge is nonsense. We did all that was possible in the frightful weather. We barely saved the ship.

“As for the gold, we touched on the island, and we did some prospecting, a very little, before we were driven offshore. The dust in the poke is all we secured. We are going back for more, quite naturally. I can prove all this to you by the log.”

Lund had been standing with his great head thrust forward as if concentrating all his remaining senses in an attempt to judge the captain’s talk. The doctor sat with one leg crossed, smoking a cigarette, his expression sardonic, sphinxlike. To Rainey, a little bewildered at being dragged into the affair, and annoyed at it, Captain Simms’ words rang true enough. He did not know what to say, whether to speak at all. Lund supplied the gap.

“If that ain’t the truth, you lie well, Simms,” he said. “But I don’t trust ye. You lie when you say you didn’t hear me call out I was blind. Sixty yards away, I was, an’ the wind hadn’t started. You deserted me—left me blind, tucked in the bloody, freezin’ carcass of a bear. Left me like the cur you are. Why, you—

The rising frenzy of Lund’s voice was suddenly broken by the clear note of a girl’s voice. One of two doors in the after-end of the main cabin had opened, and she stood in the gap, slim, yellow-haired, with gray eyes that blazed as they looked on the little tableau.

“Who says my father is a cur?” she demanded. “You?” And she faced Lund with such intrepid challenge in her voice, such stinging contempt, that the giant was silenced.

“I was dressing,” she said, “or I would have come out before. If you say my father deserted you, you lie!” Captain Simms turned to her, Doctor Carlsen had risen and moved toward her. Rainey wished he was on the dock.

“Go into your cabin, Peggy,” said the captain. “This is no place for you. I can handle the matter. Lund has cause for excitement; but I can satisfy him.”

“Knockout drops? I guessed it. That doctor’s slick!”

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

In Another Sense.

She—“Before we were married you said you couldn’t do enough for me.” He—“Well, I guess time has proved that I was right.”

Good Luck.

“Have any luck on your fishing trip?” “Yep. Won $28 playing pool er.”—Detroit Free Press.

SUNDAY SERVICES:

Sunday School 9:45
Morning Service 11:00
Epworth League 7:00
Evening Service 7:45

All the services of last Sunday were more largely attended than usual. There is evidence that more and more people are coming to realize that regular attendance upon the services of God's house is a source of personal enrichment and a duty which no one can omit without tragic loss and deep guilt.

The men of God everywhere are speaking out more plainly and telling the people what the people should know, namely, that it is a deadly sin to be willingly absent from the house of God. And all the churches are now working toward a great movement which shall mean not only that the members of the churches shall be more conscientious in regularity of attendance, but that every member of all the churches will be a real friend to his neighbors who do not go to church, and, as a real friend, tell them that if they miss the services of God's house they are missing the best there is in the community, and that when the end of life shall come and they find themselves unprepared to face the judgement, then they will realize that they have missed everything by willingly missing the services of God's house.

The coming Sunday morning the theme will be "The World's Morning Watch." A number of the young people of the Epworth League enrolled in this a few weeks ago. An opportunity will be given to all, old and young, to enroll at this morning service the coming Sunday. It is hoped none will think fifteen minutes a day too much time to take for the soul's interests.

The evening service the coming Sunday will be given to the warning of the imperative necessity of being ready now, every day, for the day of our destiny which is so likely to come upon us any minute. The subject will be "The Door Was Shut," and the choir will render Tennyson's great production, "Too Late! Ye Cannot Enter Now," set to the remarkable music written for it by Miss Lindsay.

The program of the whole Methodist church this year is: 1. Everybody go to church regularly. 2. As many new converts and members as possible. 3. Every member of the church a titling steward. The year's work will not be regarded as finished till the last member of the church is a real titler.

An Accommodating Lecturer. "Gentlemen," said the unperturbed speaker, when the lights went out and the hall was suddenly plunged in total darkness, "this does not disturb me in the least, so I shall continue my speech. I only ask that the last man out of the building let me know when he is leaving and I'll stop then."—Harper's.

SEWING FOR THE CHILDREN OCCUPIES THE SEAMSTRESS

IN ANTICIPATION of spring and because little folks wear cotton all the year round, the seamstress occupies the earliest months in the year sewing for the children. She finds at hand this year in the shops the most entrancing styles—always expressive of childhood and early youth—and the prettiest fabrics. All the old favorites in materials are here, some of them in new interpretations. And besides, there are novelties in sturdy cotton cloth patterned after English chintz or chailles or cretonnes, making a pleasant diversion from staple fabrics. Peter Pan collar also appears in printed patterns with small neat designs that include flowers, stripes, checks and dots. Yokes, girdles and neat play their dainty parts so that wardrobes of the little folks may be made up now ready for spring.

These styles generally follow accepted modes with many straight line dresses for little tots and belted or sashed models for older children, all having short or three-quarter length sleeves. Neck openings are usually round or square and, more often than not, they are collarless, or a collar is merely simulated. Simplicity remains the keynote in these given to styles, but more attention is given to details of finishing than heretofore.

The smart little dress of cotton crepe shown here is an example of the straight line style that is liked best for children under twelve years. Its short sleeves are gathered into bands that button above the elbow. These bands and small shoulder pieces are adorned with cross-stitch needlework. Three pendent crochet buttons, and oddly shaped pockets, are also decorative and the bloomers to match follow the lead of the sleeves and are gathered into bands finished with a simple slitchery.

HOME TOWN HELPS

BACK TO "OLD HOME TOWN"

To the Returning Man of Affairs, How Many Tender Memories Cluster About It!

For a number of years fall home-comings have been popular in many counties and smaller cities over the country. They are for the most part family reunions, given a wider interest because they attract to the home town or county many friends of yore who might otherwise never meet again. Social occasions are arranged, there are public addresses, special church services, historical reminiscences and various forms of entertainment for the guests from other localities, who left their old home, farms and towns, to meet, let us hope, a larger and more enduring success abroad than they could have done at the old home.

The old town looks small, no doubt, to those who went to the city for their life work; the old farm cramped, to those who now inhabit the wide reaches of the West. But to all the home-comers there are dear places, hallowed by tender memories, to visit—the brook, the ancient sycamore, the beloved hills in the country places; and in the small towns the old home with its multitude of reminiscences.

Homes pass away—into other hands. There is no continuance on earth. Change never ceases its work. Trees die, familiar prospects are marred. Only the skies are unchangeable. So there is a touch of melancholy for all home-comers except the young, because of the ravages of death among relatives and friends. Yet where the old homes are peopled by strangers and their contents distributed among the children, there is one great consolation. It is not the place or the house that is sacred. That is the mere shell set up to protect the family from the weather. The things that were in the house are the objects that the heart is really interested in—the chair that gave comfort to mother; the desk that was father's; the books the gentle and lost sister loved; the intimate possessions of the brother called West; these things touched by vanished hands are the true treasures of the old home, not the building which sheltered them.

Altogether it is well to get back to the old home town or the old home farm. It is an experience in life which does not fade. It sits something in our souls that too seldom finds expression, and it gives play to a really admirable curiosity to learn of the lives of associates in former years. The city man, particularly, loses something worth while when he turns a deaf ear to the invitation of his home town to come back and be a boy again for a few days.—Utica Globe.

CLEANUP SHOULD BE ANNUAL

Public Health as Well as Civic Neatness Is Promoted by Such an Institution.

An annual week for clearing away accumulated rubbish and trash of material origin should be permanent and the customary adjurations to the populace issued by the health department, and the fire department, the two branches of administrative activity which are particularly concerned with civic neatness.

The fire department has perhaps an easier task in educating the people in this regard than has the health department, for it is comparatively easy to instruct even the dullest citizen as to the fire hazard created by accumulations of inflammable rubbish. Every one knows how easily fires originate in trash heaps and the reminder from the fire department is sufficient to start the cleaning-up process.

Not so many people realize the danger to health which arises from permitting waste material to accumulate and gather dirt. The hazard is fully as great as the fire hazard.

Small Town Best.

We rarely hear of a person going hungry or without occupation in a country town. Sleep, which is a great restorer of vigor, is profound and undisturbed during the hours of darkness in the small town, whereas the thunder of traffic and the eternal movements of fellow lodgers in crowded city districts make night hideous and sleep a nightmare.

From a physical and spiritual standpoint humanity in the small town is exempt from many of the misery-producing elements of the large city.

When You Build.

Build your house in a plain, simple manner. Don't worry about style, eliminate all superfluous ornament. If your pocketbook compels you to build a small house, don't try to make it a small house, don't try to make it a good-sized living room instead of a small parlor and a small library. Build it to fit the site, need, purpose and environment.

Worth Knowing.

If you buy about twenty pounds of coarse salt, place it in your cellar and, this winter when the walks and steps are icy and you can't remove it, just strew or sprinkle a little about and on them, you will see the ice crack and it can be removed at once.

Communications

Editor Antioch News, Dear Sir:

Reading your paper we are surprised not having seen mentioned the masquerade given by "Our Good Time Club" of Lake Villa, January 7, 1922.

As visitors from Chicago my wife and I took the late train to Lake Villa and attended the masquerade, and we must say it was the best conducted masquerade in every respect we ever attended, and we have been to many. They certainly had a nice behaved attendance, good music and fine costumes. The committee can certainly be proud of their work and we wish them success in all their doings and hope they will soon give another.

Sincerely,
MR. AND MRS. H. G. HEREM.

Ford Tractors in Big Price Reduction

We wired you today giving the new price of the tractor, $395.00 F. O. B., Detroit. As you possibly know, the tractor plant, one of the smelters, etc., have been standing idle with the loss of thousands of dollars a day. Mr. Ford feels we might just as well assume this loss while running, thereby giving employment to thousands of men in the tractor plant and thus help improve employment conditions. The farmer is getting the benefit of this reduction; the Ford Motor Co. is willing to assume the loss on tractors now being built.

Certainly no such price has ever been quoted the farmer before on anything he had to purchase, possibly with the exception of the Ford touring car. The price of the tractor is now little more than that of a good team of horses. On almost any farm the tractor will eliminate from two to five horses. The price the Oliver people have made on the plow is less than the horse drawn plow of similar construction, namely, $75.00 retail. Inasmuch as the tractor will increase farming profits by making it possible for the farmer to do his work at the right time and to grow more crops, which you can prove, we suggest you place this letter before your banker in order that he may appreciate what we are doing. We hope that he will now see the necessity of assisting every farmer possible in the purchase of a Fordson tractor. Farmers who have grain or horses which can be sold should be willing now to sell at present prices because of the tremendous saving they can make in buying the tractor.

Tangled in His Adjectives.

At the close of a suburban political meeting the other evening the customary votes of thanks were being given, when one of the speakers electrified the gathering by asking those present to accord "a hearty vote of thanks to Mr. X" for the able manner in which he has discharged the erroneous duties of chairman of this meeting."

Remains a Mystery to Science.

Many observers have reported sounds, described as "swishing," "crackling," etc., accompanying displays of the aurora. Whether such sounds are real or imaginary or due to causes other than the aurora, is an unsettled question.

Buy It At Home

Here is a little story that has been going the rounds, and it tells the story of buying away from home, from mail order houses, so well that we think you ought to read it; if you have read it, perhaps it would be well to refresh your memory.

The other day in Oklahoma a man went into a hardware store to buy a saw. He found the kind he wanted and asked the price. It was $1.65, the dealer said.

"Good gracious," replied the shopper, "I can buy the same saw exactly from Sears-Sawbuck, the catalogue house, for $1.35."

"That's less than I paid for it," replied the dealer, "but I will meet catalogue competition, so I'll make you that saw for $1.35 also."

"All right," said the customer, "send it to my house and charge it to my account."

"Not on your life," replied the dealer. "No charge account on this. The mail order house doesn't trust you. I am simply meeting their price and terms. Fork over the cash."

The customer complied.

"Now 2 cents for postage, and 5 cents for the money order," said the dealer.

"What?"

"Certainly, you have to send a letter and a money order to a mail order house, you know."

The customer, inwardly raving, handed over the money.

"Now 25 cents for expressage," said the dealer, still holding out his hand.

"Well, I'll be—" said the customer.

But he paid it, saying, "Now hand me that saw and I'll take it home myself and be rid of this foolery."

"Hand it to you. Where do you think you are? You're in Oklahoma and I'm in Chicago. You'll have to wait two weeks for that saw."

Whereupon the dealer hung the saw on the peg, put the money in the cash drawer.

"That makes $1.67," he said. "It has cost you 2 cents more and taken two weeks longer to get it than if you had bought it from your local hardware store in the first place."

Discovering The Farmer

President Harding is making discoveries. He finds that American farmers have been laboring under serious disadvantages. They have been deprived of ready access to capital on terms suited to their conditions, and they have been discouraged, to put it mildly, from those co-operative enterprises which have done so much for agriculture in Europe.

Mr. Harding's enlightenment seems rather tardy to those who have been seeing and saying the same things for years; but at that, the president seems to be ahead of the rest of his party in Washington.

If he had made his survey before the Wilson administration put through the farm credits act, he would have found the farmers' condition with reference to securing capital much worse than it is now. If he would carry his investigations somewhat further, he would find that the blow which beat down our already staggering farm industry was the loss of European markets. But his statements, as they stand, put him well ahead of his party in congress; though it may be doubted whether, even now, he realizes how serious the situation is.

Speaking in Chicago recently, Gov. McCoy, of Indiana, made the following statement.

The gross income of an acre of corn in Indiana during 1921 was $13.68. Sixty-two per cent of Indiana farms are operated by tenants, who receive one-half of the produce, the other half going to the landlords for rent. Thus the tenant farmer receives $6.84 an acre for corn. Figuring horse labor and all in, it takes ninety hours of labor to produce one acre of corn. So the farmer receives less than seven cents an hour for the time put on his crops on the basis of the price of corn December 1.

Seven cents per hour for American citizens engaged in work which is the industrial basis of the nation!

One wishes that that summary of farm income could be read aloud three times per day in every city household. The average city worker does not understand what farm prosperity, or the lack of it, means to him. Yet the connection is simple and direct.

Almost half the population of the United States gets its living directly from the soil. Almost half the market for city manufacturers is furnished by the farms; and some great manufacturing industries sell to farmers everything they produce. When the farmer stops buying, the city employes stop working. Unemployment begins, of course, with those industries selling directly and exclusively to the farms. The Journal calls to mind an old-established business in this city, all whose customers are farmers, which has been shut down for more than a year. Once started, unemployment spreads in wider and wider circles till a condition exists like that prevailing today, when men out of work are numbered literally by millions.

The farmer can not buy city goods while he is working for 7 cents per hour. Farming is skilled labor. Work in the cities requiring an equal degree of skill probably averages 70 cents per hour—when employed at all. There is the rub. It takes ten day's farm work to buy one day's output of a workman in the city. Naturally, the man of the soil adopts the only course open to him and so far as possible he stops buying altogether.

When that happens, the city man quits working. The appeals of charitable organizations show that hundreds of thousands of men who normally are self-supporting are without sufficient food.

The great problem before American statesmanship is that of making the farm as attractive as the factory. The American people are to be congratulated that Mr. Harding has grasped that truth. One hopes devoutly that he will take his party along with him on the tour of enlightenment. This problem is too big and vital for partisanship. There can be no real prosperity in this country unless the farmer gets his proper share of rewards; and he can not get this until his European markets are restored, until better and cheaper transportation is provided, until the "spread" between what the farmer gets and what the consumer pays is reduced to a minimum by improved marketing methods, in which the department of agriculture should lead the way.

March 2 Last Day for Filing in Primary; Ban Separate Boxes

Springfield, Ill.—The rules for filing primary petitions will be the same this year as in former years under his administration, Secretary of State Louis L. Emmerson announced today. His statement is as follows:

"The first day for filing petitions for the primary election on April 11 will be February 10 and the last day will be March 2. In accordance with established custom petitions received in the regular mail on the morning of February 10 will be filed before any others. No advantage will be gained, therefore, by handing the petitions in, by sending them by messenger or by special delivery. Not until all of the petitions received in the regular mail have been disposed of will any others be filed."

Under the law the names of candidates for state offices and for congressmen-at-large rotate on the ballot by districts. The names of candidates for district offices appear in the order in which they are filed. The purpose in filing petitions received in the mail first is to give all an equal chance.

Separate ballot boxes and ballots for women will not be required for the primary or election, Secretary Emmerson is informing county clerks who write to inquire. Following the adoption of the federal suffrage act, Attorney General Brandage rendered an opinion that it was no longer necessary to keep the ballots of men and women separate, as no purpose was served by so doing.

SPRING BLOUSES IN GAY COLORS REFINED IN STYLES

THIRICE welcome are the newly-arrived spring blouses. They are mostly cheerful in color, to say the least, and at the same time they are refined in style. Above all they have attributes that are distinctly novel.

These new style-features include the combination of two different materials in one blouse, an emphasis placed on the peasant cuff (a more or less narrow wrist band) the ingenious employment of decorative slashes, especially in sleeves. Many-colored embroideries, of various kinds, put a resource in the hands of designers that is inexhaustible.

For fancy blouses the materials used are crepe de chine, crepe chenille, crepe satin and georgette. These are all lovely mediums for the high colors that are gracefully gay, and therefore destined to be popular. These colors are pretty in cotton goods also and so successful that they serve for blouses patterned after those of silk, made in about the same styles and enchanting colors.

All this news of spring blouses is welcome just now to those women who forestall their summer needs, at this season while they are spending much time indoors. Blouses are among the things that the home dressmaker is most successful with.

One of the two blouses shown here sounds familiar style notes, presenting the over-the-skirt treatment and the kimono sleeve, but it adopts a new neckline and is gathered up along the under arm sleeve. This blouse is made of crepe satin and has an unusual pattern in embroidery adorning the front and sleeves and defining the neck line.

The blouse at the right is one of many tie-backs. It is made of black crepe de chine and lace, the lace arranged in panels at the back and front, is caught in at the waist line in front but falls free at the back.

FORDSON TRACTOR

New Price $395 Reduced from $625
F. O. B. Detroit

Again Henry Ford shows his great interest in the American farmer by reducing the price of his tractor to a little more than the cost of a good team of horses, which the tractor will eliminate on any farm.

This is what the tractor will do for you, Mr. Farmer—and we can prove every statement:

It will enable you to DO YOUR WORK AT THE RIGHT TIME
It will enable you to PLOW DEEPER
It will enable you to DO BETTER CULTIVATION OF SOIL
It will enable you to ELIMINATE HELP
It will enable you to ELIMINATE HORSES
It will enable you to ELIMINATE MOST OF THE HARD WORK
It will enable you to INTEREST YOUR BOY IN FARMING
It will enable you to WORK MORE LAND, because the tractor will do nearly three times the amount of work a team of horses will do

All the above means more profit to you. In fact, the FORDSON TRACTOR means making farming profitable TODAY for it cuts costs and enables you to produce more. DON'T DELAY ORDERING YOUR TRACTOR because we will never be able to supply the demand this price will create.

Plows and disc harrows have been greatly reduced also

BRIEFS OF VARIOUS NEWS

The Nash Motor Co., of Milwaukee and Kenosha, made profits of $2,000,000 in 1921, according to the statement carried in the current issue of the Wall Street Journal and confirmed at Kenosha. The report shows the company to be in the best financial condition, having weathered the recent depression with a comfortable profit, and emerging from it without any bank obligations and with a surplus of more than $13,000,000 in cash and government securities available.

Solid milk cubes are one of the most recent dairy laboratory products, the cream being first separated and then remixed with cream and pressed into small cubes which readily dissolve in coffee, tea or other liquids.

Donna Mac, the best race horse ever trained in Beloit, was sold last week for $3,500 to a Chicago race horse fancier. She brought first money in eleven out of twelve entries at the best races in this section last year.

During the past week nothing new has developed at the Nestles plant. The Nippersink Dairy company has bought some of the equipment from the big plant which they will use to equip their receiving station at the St. Paul depot.

The hemp factory at Union Grove is operating a day and night shift for the purpose of getting out a rush order of their product.

The New Munster Volunteer Firemen are selling tickets for a big firemen's ball to be held at Spetzman's hall, New Munster, on Friday evening, Feb. 10. The affair promises to eclipse any ever held at that place.

Chicago is to have daylight saving this year from the last Sunday in April to the last Sunday in September. This means from April 30, to September 24.

The "missing link" in Sheridan road, the half mile of unpaved roadway through the business district of Zion, soon will become a matter of history. The city council of Zion last week passed an ordinance providing for the paving of this stretch of road with reinforced concrete.

Channel Lake School

Several of the pupils have had to break their good attendance records because of sickness.

The first, second and third grades are reading in new books now.

Mr. and Mrs. King and daughter, relatives of Mr. and Mrs. Roberts, began their return trip of four hundred miles to Kenton, Ohio, after a two months stay with their relatives here and Chicago.

Mrs. Fred Runyard and daughters were Chicago visitors over Sunday. Leslie Rogers received an injury while working at the California Ice company and will be unable to work for a few weeks.

Mrs. A. Case and Mrs. Leonard Case left for Texas last Wednesday morning.

Friday being Mr. Cox's birthday, about twenty-five friends gathered at his home in the evening to help him celebrate. The evening was spent in playing cards and games.

The California Ice company finished filling the five rooms in the ice house on Sunday. Monday, the Oetting Ice company finished.

Geo. D. Watts of Beaver Crossing, Nebraska, is visiting at the Rudolph home.

Mrs. H. S. Roberts and Cornelia were callers at school last Friday.

Gift of Good Literature.

Don't forget that good literature will do for you the following things: "Give you an outlet, keep before you the vision of the ideal, supply a better knowledge of human nature, restore the past to you, show you the glory of the commonplace and give you a mastery of your own language."—C. Alphonso Smith.

Protection Furnished by Nature.

An ancient example of "protective mimicry" is seen in the wings of fossil cockroaches of the Coal age, which are strikingly like the leaflets of certain ferns that flourished at the same period. This resemblance undoubtedly aided the insects to conceal themselves among the fallen leaflets.

DAIRY POINTS

MANY USES OF THERMOMETER

Particularly Essential to Give Temperatures of Milk, Cream and of Butter Making.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Hardly a useful instrument around a farm is more neglected than the thermometer. Properly appreciated, it would serve the farmer in many ways. Exact information on the temperature of the air is of importance; but there are dozens of other uses.

A thermometer should be the constant companion of the dairyman. In probably no other department of the farm can a thermometer be used to greater advantage than in connection with dairy operations.

The temperatures at which milk, cream, and butter are kept, and at which the various operations of butter making are carried on, are very important.

When milk is to be sold as such it should be immediately cooled. The reason for this is to stop the increase of bacteria as much as possible. Bacteria will reproduce themselves every half hour if the temperatures are favorable.

If milk is to be separated by the centrifugal process, it should have a temperature of about 90 degrees; if by the gravity methods, it should be cooled to 50 degrees very soon after milking. The temperature at which cream is churned is an important item; 52 to 60 degrees Fahrenheit is considered about right. Butter should be stored in a cool place to keep it sweet. For all these purposes it is essential to have a thermometer, and one that can be depended upon for accuracy.

The necessity of maintaining correct temperature in an incubator need not be emphasized. The temperature is correct at 103 degrees, and it should not go lower than that, especially during the first six days. Some incubators have an electric alarm which rings a bell when the temperature goes below 103 degrees.

In the care of live stock, the clinical or fever thermometer may be found very useful. The following are the normal temperatures of farm animals: Swine, 104; goats or sheep, 102 to 103; cows, 101 to 102; horses, 99 to 100; dogs, 99 to 100. A rise of 1 or 2 degrees is unimportant if temporary; but if permanent it indicates a serious condition which needs attention. A rise of 10 to 12 degrees in animals is usually fatal.

In calling a veterinarian by telephone, it is often important to be able to give the exact temperature of the animal. A good clinical thermometer, if available, should be used according to veterinary methods.

The thermometer will tell whether the cellar or storage house is of the right temperature for produce. Apples are frequently stored in outside cellars, where the temperature is best if it can be kept at 31 or 32 degrees; but 34 or 36 degrees will give satisfactory results. If the temperature is to be higher, the fruit should be placed in storage soon after being picked, to forestall preliminary decay.

For atmospheric temperature of a room the thermometer should be hung, if possible, away from the wall and where it will not be affected by air currents from open doors or windows or from stoves or artificial heat in the cold seasons.

With constant use one becomes acquainted with the instrument, so that dependence will be placed upon it; and with constant use uniform success in operations conditioned on temperature may be hoped for.

MAKE ORCHARD WORTH WHILE

Trees Not Pruned and Sprayed Might as Well Be Cut Out and Land Planted to Corn.

Get ready for spraying the orchard trees. Better prune them first on warm days now. An orchard that is not sprayed and pruned these days might about as well be cut out and the land be put into corn. Wormy apples are neither valuable or usable at home.

MONTHS OF SUFFERING

How a Baltimore Girl Recovered Her Health

Baltimore, Maryland. "For several months I suffered with severe backache and general weakness. I could not sleep comfortably at night for pains in my back. I found your book at home one day and after reading it began at once to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I have had very good results and some of my girl friends are taking it now. You may use this letter to help other girls, as the letters in your book helped me." — ROSE WADSWORTH, 3013 Roseland Place, Baltimore, Md.

That is the thought so often expressed in letters recommending Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. These women know what they have suffered, they describe their symptoms and state how they were finally made well. Just plain statements, but they want other women to be helped.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is a medicine made from medicinal roots and herbs, and without drugs, to relieve the sickness women so often have, which is indicated by backache, weak feelings, nervousness, and no ambition to get anything done or to go anywhere. It has helped many women. Why not try it?

Help Your Kidneys

Is a cold or grip keeping you miserable? Are you tortured with dull, persistent backache and sharp, cutting pains? Likely your kidneys need help. Colds and grip fill the blood with poisons. Your overworked kidneys have become weakened filtering these poisons off. That's why you feel weak and depressed and suffer from headaches, dizzy spells and urinary disorders. Don't wait for serious kidney disease. Help your kidneys with Doan's Kidney Pills. Doan's have helped thousands and should help you. Ask your neighbor!

A Michigan Case

Mrs. Raoul Croze, 240 Calverley St., Houghton, Mich., says: "My back ached continually and when in bed I would have to lie flat for at every sharp pain started through my back. I felt tired and spots bothered my sight. My kidneys were weak. But I bought Doan's Kidney Pills and they cured me of kidney trouble."

LAND GROWS RICH

Wonderful Development of Canada in Forty Years.

Four Decades Ago Little Considered, Today One of the Greatest Granaries and Dairying Centers.

The recent announcement that the sale of the first section of Canadian Pacific land was sold forty years ago, and when you read that the first carload of wheat was shipped from Winnipeg forty years ago, the changes that have taken place since then are matters of reminiscence, but yet of interest. What forty years ago was an unknown quantity, barren because but little production was attempted, is today one of the greatest granaries in the world. Then there was scarcely any farm live stock in the West. Dairying was not engaged in at all. Today there are 6,098,317 farm animals on the prairies, of which 881,809 are milch cows; and dairying is only second in importance to grain growing, in the West.

Forty years ago the shipment of one carload of grain was a notable exploit. Today, Canada ranks as the second largest wheat-producing country in the world, with 320,185,300 bushels, 90 per cent of which was grown in the three prairie provinces, of which the province of Saskatchewan produced more than half. The Dominion is today the second largest producer of oats, with 530,710,000 bushels, of which 90 per cent was grown between Winnipeg and the Rocky mountains; and the fifth largest producer of barley with 63,811,000 bushels, of which the prairies yielded 65 per cent.

Forty years ago scarcely any of the rich soil had been brought under cultivation. The farm machinery of the time was crude; there were no competent advisers; government experimental farms were a blessing that came years later.

Yet these hardy pioneers stuck it out, and in forty years numbers of them are enjoying their declining days in the communities they wrested from the wilderness, prosperous, contented, with their children's families gathered about them or seeking their own fortunes still further westward or northward. They have seen civilization step in to the West and the wilderness swept out. Today are thriving cities and towns where bleaching buffalo bones marked the ox trails of forty years ago. Today are mighty freight trains, each with its thousand-ton cargo of wheat or merchandise, roaring down the roads where the old carts creaked. Today are schools within walking distance of every farmhouse, churches within driving distance of every home. Today are telephones and every modern convenience linking communities over vast distances by the common bond of the spoken word.

Forty years ago the Rockies were practically an impenetrable barrier, the Pacific coast being reached from the east by ships sailing round Cape Horn. The province of Manitoba had a population of 62,260, compared with 613,008 in 1921. Winnipeg was then a frontier town with 7,987 people, and Brandon, which was regarded as a far-dung outpost of the West, boasted of a few hundred in population. In 1891 it only had 3,778. Such places as Calgary and Edmonton were mere trading posts in the Northwest territories. Buffalo roamed the prairie in their native state.

Today on these plains are to be seen herds of cattle, bands of horses and droves of sheep, from any of which can easily be selected stock that can carry off premiums, sweepstakes and championships in competition with the best in any other part of the world.—Advertisement.

WILL MEAN MUCH TO WORLD

French Physician Claims to Have Discovered Cure for Much-Dreaded Disease, Cancer.

A positive cure of cancer, it is reported in Paris, has been effected by a surgeon of the municipal hospital at Blois, who asserts that for some months he has been treating several patients with an entirely new formula, without knife or radium, and is satisfied they not only are cured, but declares he has definitely proved that cancer has a physiological origin in certain glands. Doctor Baronami's researches, which he has conducted for a number of years, have been the subject of numerous papers communicated to the French Academy of Science, while he continued his development of the gland theory at the Blois hospital. This theory is that cancer starts from trouble in the secretions of the glands in which occur, consecutively, an alteration of the globules and blood plasma. He claims the cure is effected by the application of a chemical organic treatment which not only reacts on the general condition of the patient, but heals the cancer without directly acting on it. The interest of many scientists has been directed recently to the work at Blois, where Doctor Baronami is demonstrating his theory.

MOTHER! CLEAN

CHILD'S BOWELS WITH CALIFORNIA FIG SYRUP

Even a sick child loves the "fruity" taste of "California Fig Syrup." If the little tongue is coated, or if your child is listless, cross, feverish, full of cold, or has colic, give a teaspoonful to cleanse the liver and bowels. In a few hours you can see for yourself how thoroughly it works all the constipation poison, sour bile and waste out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again.

Millions of mothers keep "California Fig Syrup" handy. They know a teaspoonful today saves a sick child tomorrow. Ask your druggist for genuine "California Fig Syrup" which has directions for babies and children of all ages printed on bottle. Mother! You must say "California" or you may get an imitation fig syrup.—Advertisement.

WOMEN NEED SWAMP-ROOT

Thousands of women have kidney and bladder trouble and never suspect it. Women's complaints often prove to be nothing else but kidney trouble, or the result of kidney or bladder disease.

If the kidneys are not in a healthy condition, they may cause the other organs to become diseased.

Pain in the back, headache, loss of ambition, nervousness, are often times symptoms of kidney trouble.

Don't delay starting treatment. Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, a physician's prescription, obtained at any drug store, may be just the remedy needed to overcome such conditions.

Get a medium or large size bottle immediately from any drug store.

However, if you wish first to test this great preparation send ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., for a sample bottle. When writing be sure and mention this paper.—Advertisement.

Men and Marriage.

DYED HER BABY'S COAT, A SKIRT AND CURTAINS WITH "DIAMOND DYES"

Each package of "Diamond Dyes" contains directions so simple any woman can dye or tint her old, worn, faded things new. Even if she has never dyed before, she can put a new, rich color into shabby skirts, dresses, waists, coats, stockings, sweaters, coverings, draperies, hangings, everything. Buy Diamond Dyes—no other kind—then perfect home dyeing is guaranteed. Just tell your druggist whether the material you wish to dye is wool or silk, or whether it is linen, cotton, or mixed goods. Diamond Dyes never streak, spot, fade or run.—Advertisement.

Whether you are teaching Sunday School or not, you are very welcome and urged to attend.

Our community had another disastrous fire on Saturday morning when the fine summer home of J. K. Dering on Fox Lake burned to the ground only a small part of the furnishings being saved, as the fire had a good start before being discovered. Origin of the fire is doubtful but probably was due to defective wiring as it seemed to be in the upper part of the house, under the roof. The Antioch and Fox Lake fire departments were on hand, but could do little. Mr. and Mrs. Dering are in Mexico for the winter.

We were much grieved to hear Sunday of the death of little James Wald at his home in Tampa, Fla., of bronchial pneumonia and our heartfelt sympathy goes out to his sorrowing father and sisters.

Six reels of movies at the church on Friday evening at 7 o'clock so come early and enjoy them. Admission 10 and 20 cents.

Fair Directors Elect Officers

The first meeting of the board of directors of the West Kenosha County fair was held at the home of R. T. Buf-ton at Silverlake last Saturday. The board elected the following officers:

President—Wm. Luke, Wheatland.
Vice President—R. S. Ihlenfeldt, Wilmot.
Secretary—R. T. Buf-ton, Silverlake.
Treasurer—Geo. Dean, Bassett.

The next meeting of the board of directors will be held in about four weeks at which time the premium book will be arranged for the coming year. The board is anxious to have the premium books in the hands of the public as soon as possible in order that the public may know definitely at an early date just what premiums will be awarded. It was felt by the board members that the last premium book was gotten out entirely too late, and this shortcoming will be remedied this year.

Roscoe Pease and four other representatives of a Racine stock company were in Wilmot selling stock in their concern for several days last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Wright were in Kenosha on Wednesday.

U. F. High School Notes

The basket ball team of the Alden high school went down to defeat before the Wilmot school team here by a score of 41 to 11. The Wilmot boys outweighed the Alden boys by a good margin and this fact with the superior basket shooting of the Wilmot boys caused Alden's defeat. The fast Williams Bay high school team will be on hand at the Woodman hall on next Friday evening, and a good game may be looked forward to on that date. The usual dance will follow the game on next Friday evening. The Wilmot girls team will play the Williams Bay girls team on the same evening.

Mr. Wright, our band instructor, was called to Chicago last Thursday and consequently band practice had to be postponed until the following week. Edith Peterson visited school on Wednesday.

Refreshments were served at the school house after the Alden game Friday night for the team members.

The next meeting of the Literary society will be held on Friday, February 17.

The juniors held a class meeting on Thursday.

Ruby Winn is taking sewing this semester.

The underweight class met Thursday afternoon. The girls had the largest percentage of gain for the past week. Elsie Richter is now at the head of the class.

Good
Printing

THE kind of printing that pays dividends is the kind you should have. Pale, muddy, poorly arranged printed matter is worse than none. The quality of your business is often judged by the quality of your stationery. Inferior printing gives an impression of cheapness that is hard to overcome, while good printing carries with it a desirable suggestion of quality.

We produce only Quality Printing. Whether you want an inexpensive handbill or a letterhead in colors, if you order it from us you will be sure of getting good work. We have the equipment and the "know how" that enable us to get out really good printing—printing that impresses people with the good taste of its users. That is the only kind of printing that
